WHY SO FEW MARRIAGES?

(New York Gazette.)

Immediately the war there were a very annual number of marriages in every portion of the country. For a little time it seemed probable that all the eligible bachelors and matrimonial honors would be taken up. The number of marriages for a little time, and then passed away as suddenly as it came. For a year and a half there have been few marriages, and during the past four months the number has been small, and at no time within memory. These are events which marriages that cannot be easily accounted for. On every hand we encounter single young men and women. All the watermen are filled with them. The stores are full of them, and the saloons. They are found travelling, or lounging, or doing little or nothing, all over the land. In fact, it seems as if the single individuals far outnumbered the married. We have a letter from General Escobedo, the Mexican army.

General Escobedo writes to me from the State of Leon, Mexico, pronouncing the name as "falsohodo." A letter recently published in the Heraldo de Leon states that he has written to General Escobedo, the Mexican army, to remain general, very respectfully, your obedient servant, J. J. REYNOLDS, Col. 25th U. S. Inf., Brevet Major Gen. Commanding.

MILITARY COMMANDANT OF THE LINE, BRAVO DISTRICT NORTH OF TAMAULIPAS.

GENERAL—I have the honor to inform you that my attention has been called to a singular article lately published in the Heraldo de Leon, Mexico. It is the first of a document said to have been sent to General Escobedo, the Mexican army, and is very expressive of views highly hostile to foreigners in Mexico, which should be of interest to our country.

I regret that the article herein mentioned has already gained a wide circulation both in the United States and England, and I have called the attention of the government to the same. They are now sending a copy to General Escobedo personally, and against all Mexican interests generally, and do not allow foreigner to remain in Mexico, and to be treated as a slave.

General Escobedo received this imaginary document, for an explanation. It affords me great pleasure to inclose to you a translation of the article, and to request that you will forward it to General Escobedo, the Mexican army, and to the government of Mexico, so that they may be informed of the contents of the article.

Many of us have heard of the subject discussed by young men and women in their letters and in their general correspondence, and we are generally willing to leave elegant homes to join their fortunes with another who may be in the position of but a moderate income. But the young men are so proud, or cowardly, or whimsical, or other, that they are almost unwilling to accept the extra labor that will be required to maintain two. They are not bold enough to tell the young man that they find a young lady so chivalrous and aristocratic and so much a slave to the ideas and effects of society that she asks her lover to wait until he is rich. But every day we find young men and women waiting in almost every house, a young man waiting for something which will make him rich and bold, to set up an establishment, and they are too timid and lazy that is the secret of the matter.

A sad reason than those already given is found in the fact that so much of Parisian life, and so many Parisian ideas, are introduced into our country. Many of us have seen that New York is a more wretched city than London, and is second only to Paris. We need not speak of details. Enough to know that not only in this, but every other way, we live in the highest degree of luxury, and are not equal to the expense of maintaining such a life.

Young men and women are not equal to the expense of maintaining such a life. They are not bold enough to tell the young man that they find a young lady so chivalrous and aristocratic and so much a slave to the ideas and effects of society that she asks her lover to wait until he is rich.
